

Darl Thomas

Darl Thomas earned a Master of Fine Arts at Cranbrook Academy of Art in Michigan and a BFA at the University of Utah in Salt Lake City. Darl has participated in numerous exhibitions in Utah and Colorado, as well as created many pieces for public commissions including the ATK Memorial Sculpture in Corinne, Utah, a piece for Park City Transit Center, the Scott M. Matheson Court Building in Salt Lake City, as well as pieces for Wasatch Hollow Park and Weber State University. Having grown up near a steel fabricating company where Darl would spend much of his time, it inspired Darl's future artwork.
